For the pollinators

Volunteers unloaded, sorted and marked nearly 6,000 native pollinator plants Thursday in preparation for gardeners to pick up their orders Friday. The plants were sold by the Jefferson County Pollinator Action Group to raise money for public pollinator habitats to be planted in visible places. Vicki Wehner, coordinator of the county Soil and Water Conservation District, and PAG member Dale Sides got plastic stakes ready for the potted plants. One of the habitats will be on the Hanover College campus on the east side of the Science Center. Planting had been scheduled for today but has been postponed until 4 p.m. Tuesday. Commissioners backtrack on political sign ordinance on courthouse grounds

By TALI HUNT

The Jefferson County Commissioners voted Thursday to rescind the ordinance regarding political signs, which was approved in April. Commissioner Robert Little said he felt he had acted hastily in proposing the new county rule that said the courthouse would fall under the same guidelines and rules as polling locations — regarding campaigning and electioneering — both of which are not allowed within 50 feet of the schute. The ordinance passed in April was not set to go into effect until June 1, 2019.

The commissioners decided this week to handle the signage on the courthouse property on a case-by-case basis, as they had before. When Little proposed the ordinance, he cited complaints and concerns from citizens about the signs being in front of the veterans and Samuel Woodfill memorials.

The commissioners on Thursday also conducted a public hearing on behalf of the Deputy Volunteer Fire Department. The fire department needed the public hearing as part of a grant application to the state for funds available through the Office of Community and Rural Affairs. The department is seeking $500,000 as a nonprofit to help cover some of the costs of rebuilding its fire station. The station burned in December. Three fire trucks and nearly all of the personal protection gear for volunteers was lost.

More police calls to Victoria Inn

Stabbing report Friday morning; suspect caught

Courier staff report

Reports of a stabbing sent law enforcement and first responders to the Victoria Inn in the 800 block of East Main around 10:30 a.m. Friday morning and by afternoon a suspect was believed to be in custody.

The Madison Police Department, which is leading the investigation, was unable to release information by midafternoon Friday.

Details of what had occurred were not available, but based on activities at the scene and comments from bystanders, officers were said to be searching Friday morning for a man with red hair, who reportedly ran down an alley near the Victoria Inn after the incident.

An EMS unit left the area with someone inside and with lights flashing and using sirens. It could not be determined whether the victim was a male or female.

"Today's unfortunate news is just another in a string of issues happening at this location," said Mayor Damon Welch. "Our local and state officials have all been working diligently to ensure that rules and regulations are followed in this location and numerous other properties around the city, while ensuring we uphold the legal rights of property owners. We will continue to hold property owners throughout the city accountable to the fullest extent legally possible."

The property owner is listed on records as Mark E. Nay of Madison.

Madison police, Jefferson County Sheriff's officers and Indiana State Police responded along with King's Daughters' Hospital EMS and the Madison Fire Department.

Trail grants include rehab of bridge where 2 teens killed

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Part of a nearly $1.3 million state grant will go toward converting an old railroad bridge into pedestrian use along a recreational trail where two teenage girls were hiking when they were killed. The bodies of Liberty German, 14, and Abigail Williams, 13, were found in February 2013. The project will include the addition of decking and safety rails for Delphi's Monon High Bridge, which rises more than 60 feet over Deer Creek. It was among $25 million in grants for 17 trail projects across the state announced Thursday by Gov. Eric Holcomb. Most go toward new paved trails, with the largest grant of $4.9 million going to the Marion County town of Speedway. The grant money comes from a $1 billion payment from the Indiana Toll Road operator in a deal allowing fee increases for large trucks.

Recycling grant proposals open

INDIANAPOLIS — Public and private businesses, local governments and nonprofits are eligible to submit proposals for recycling grants ranging from $1,000 up to $250,000, the Indiana Department of Environmental Management announced Wednesday. The grants are funded through IDEM's Recycling Market Development Program. The agency said eligible projects will focus on reuse, reduction, and recycling methods of municipal solid waste. A 50 percent match in funding is required. IDEM said proposals should demonstrate an understanding of the changing economy for recyclers and look at where money can be used most effectively by businesses and communities to increase statewide recycling goals. The agency said proposals will be accepted through 5 p.m. on June 21. More information is available at https://www.in.gov/idem/recycle/2358.htm

Jurors deadlock on life sentence

LAFAYETTE — Jurors deadlocked on whether to recommend a sentence of life in prison for a man convicted of murder and robbery in the 2017 slayings of two people. The Journal & Courier reported jurors were dismissed Thursday after deadlocking on the question. They convicted Deshay Hackner, 24, of Evansville in the deaths of Dewone Broomfield, 29, and his girlfriend, Mary Woodruff, 28. A hearing was planned Friday in Lafayette. Defense attorney Conor O'Daniel said Hackner faces 51-202 years in prison if a life sentence isn't given. Broomfield and Woodruff were killed in Evansville in Vanderburgh County, but the trial was moved to Lafayette in Tippecanoe County after pre-trial publicity. Another defendant, William Rice II, is awaiting trial on murder and robbery charges.

Officials monitoring reservoir near capacity

BIRDSEYE — Officials are closely monitoring Patoka Lake after recent heavy rains filled the sprawling reservoir to near capacity. Representatives from the cities of Jasper and Huntingburg and Dubois County met Wednesday to discuss rising water levels at the 8,800-acre reservoir, which has climbed to nearly 90 percent of capacity. The (Jasper) Herald reported local stakeholders voiced support for aggressively releasing water from the lake over the next two weeks. Patoka Lake is managed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which approved releasing extra water from its dam in March after local government agencies and area farmers expressed concerns about its rising waters.

Woman to plead guilty to neglect of son

TERRE HAUTE — A woman has agreed to plead guilty to neglect in the dehydration death of her infant son after she removed his feeding tube. Tabetha Smith, 39, would face a 16-year sentence if the plea entered Thursday is accepted. Vigo Superior Court Judge Sarah Mullican took the plea agreement under advisement. The Tribune-Star reported Smith told police she removed her 3-month-old son's feeding tube against doctors' orders at least five days before her son died on March 12, 2018. She told police the child was born with Down syndrome, unattached intestine, heart defects and other medical issues. He was released from a hospital with a feeding tube, but Smith said she began bottle-feeding the baby due to "continued congestion" and thought he was "doing well" without the tube.

Mom drives in flooded road; toddler drowns

SOMERSET — Authorities say a 2-year-old was killed when his mother drove past a "high water" sign and into a flooded Wabash County road. Indiana State Police say Anthonitte Carter, 22, of Indianapolis was headed eastbound on County Road 925 South Thursday when the accident occurred. State police said in a statement, Carter "allegedly did not see the sign and drove into floodwater which had completely covered the road." The water's strong current carried Carter's vehicle to the north side of County Road 925 South and became "completely submerged." Carter was able to escape, but her son, Eric Longer, did not make it out of the car despite the efforts of his mother. Conservation officers from the Indiana Department of Natural Resources and Wabash County Sheriff's Department deputies rescued a struggling Carter from the water. The toddler was found dead inside.

STATE BRIEFS

10 years for injury to police officer

ALBION — A man has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for seriously injuring a police officer while fleeing authorities. Kevin J. Turner, 53, of Huntertown had pleaded guilty to three felony charges, including resisting law enforcement, for the October incident involving Kendallville police Officer Blake Kugler. Police were pursuing Turner for riding his motorcycle recklessly when Kugler was injured. The (Kendallville) News-Sun reported the officer was standing outside his patrol car in a hospital parking lot when Turner clipped one of Kugler's legs with his motorcycle, causing a serious injury that required surgery. A Noble County judge who sentenced Turner last week to 15 years in prison, with five years suspended, also suspended his driver's license for 16 years and ordered him to pay $29,000 in restitution.

Woman charged in boyfriend's killing

CROWN POINT — A woman accused of driving over her boyfriend twice with a car has been charged in his killing. Briana Rice, 23, of Hammond is charged with murder, voluntary manslaughter and leaving the scene of a fatal accident, in the April 24 death of Terrondy Jones, 25. She appeared for an initial hearing Monday in Lake County during which a judge entered a not guilty plea on her behalf. The Post-Tribune reported that a witness told police she saw a couple arguing outside an East Chicago apartment before a man began walking away from a car. The witness said a woman driver then ran over the man twice before driving away from the scene.

Missing woman's foot found in pond

CROWN POINT — Authorities say they've confirmed that a human foot found in April in a pond was that of a missing Indianapolis-area woman. Police responded in Crown Point after a fisherman reported snagging what appeared to be a human foot. Officers determined the remains were human and a distinct tattoo led authorities to believe the remains belonged to Najah Ferrell, 30, of Avon, who has been missing since mid-March. The Avon Police Department said Wednesday that the identification was confirmed by DNA analysis and comparison. Family members have said that Ferrell left for work early March 15 and never made it. Ferrell's vehicle was found March 26 abandoned in Indianapolis and some of her belongings were located along an interstate. The investigation into Ferrell's disappearance is ongoing.

Bevin administration gets sickout records

FRANKFORT — Kentucky Education Commissioner Wayne Lewis said the names of teachers who may have been involved in sickouts this year have been turned over to Gov. Matt Bevin's administration. Lewis told the Courier Journal that the Department of Education received a subpoena from the state Thursday and turned over the documents. He said the records from 10 districts are related to sickouts between Feb. 28 and March 14. Attorney General Andy Beshear and the Jefferson County Teachers Association this week filed a lawsuit against Bevin's labor secretary, trying to block subpoenas as part of an investigation into the sickouts. The subpoenas seek the names of teachers who might have used sick days to attend statehouse rallies, forcing some districts to cancel classes. Beshear said Thursday night he wants to prevent teachers from being fined by the Labor Cabinet.

3-year-old boy dies from dog bite

LOUISVILLE— Police say a 3-year-old boy has died after being bitten by a dog inside a home. Louisville Officer Lamont Washington said police responded to the home about noon Thursday, and the boy was given CPR. Police closed down streets as the child was taken to a hospital, but Washington said in a news release that the boy died from his injuries. The child's identity wasn't released. The investigation was continuing, and the release said Louisville Metro Animal Services will quarantine the dog for 10 days under its policy.

Woman charged in attack outside clinic

LOUISVILLE — A woman is charged with assaulting an 82-year-old woman who tried to hand her a flyer outside the state's only abortion clinic. WDRB-TV cited a criminal summons in reporting that Janaya Gregory, 31, initially ignored the woman, but then turned and "charged," hitting the woman and causing her to fall backward. Police say witnesses to the April 12 incident wrote down the attacker's license plate before she left. The Courier Journal reported Gregory entered a not guilty plea Wednesday to a charge of second-degree assault. Police say the elderly woman suffered a broken femur requiring surgery. Police declined comment on the literature the victim was handing out, but the Kentucky Right to Life Association posted on social media that one of its members was assaulted outside the clinic.

Bevin blocks thousands of social media users

LOUISVILLE — Newly released court records say Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin casts a wide net when blocking people on social media, citing reasons such as surpassing "a limit on idiocy" and "trolling." The number of blocked accounts has ballooned from 600 to nearly 3,000 since two years ago. The Courier Journal reported the records are part of an ongoing federal lawsuit against Bevin by the American Civil Liberties Union of Kentucky. It sued on behalf of two Kentuckians who say being blocked violates their First Amendment rights. Records say the Republican governor's staffers hid online comments including words such as womb, menstruation, uterus, booger, tax returns and Trump. They say Bevin also broadly ordered staffers in 2017 to "sweep out the trash" on Facebook. ACLU attorneys say screenshots of

UofL studying printing solar panels

LOUISVILLE— The University of Louisville has won a $1 million grant for researching the manufacture of thin solar panels by repurposing printing presses. The university said in a release that the goal is to reduce the cost of producing solar panels. The grant comes from the U.S. Department of Energy Solar Energy Technologies Office. The project at the Conn Center for Renewable Energy Research will focus on thin film solar cell production using a roll-to-roll platform, the same used to print newspapers. Thad Druffel, who is leading the research at the Conn Center, says the technology can revitalize a declining printing industry and boost a growing solar industry.

Teen at center of viral encounter sues NBC

COVINGTON— The teen at the heart of an encounter with a Native American activist in Washington has sued NBC for $275 million alleging that it falsely labeled him a racist who instigated a threatening confrontation. The attorneys for Nicholas Sandmann also filed suit earlier this year against CNN and The Washington Post and are threatening numerous other news organizations, including The Associated Press. In papers filed Wednesday in federal court in Covington, Sandmann and his parents alleged that NBCUniversal "created a false narrative by portraying the 'confrontation' as a 'hate crime' committed by Nicholas. The suit said false reports about the teen were broadcast and posted online and on Twitter. NBC did not immediately respond to a phone call and an email seeking comment.

Fight over tobacco ends in stabbing

SOMERSET — Authorities say a high school student has been stabbed and another charged with assault. News outlets report Pulaski County Sheriff's Office responded Wednesday to a fight at Pulaski County High School. A statement from the agency said the altercation occurred in a boys' bathroom during a class change, and no other students were involved. Student Damien Erp told WKYT-TV that he was in the restroom when it happened. He said two boys were fighting over smokeless tobacco when one stabbed the other. Katessa Brock told The Commonwealth Journal that her son, Daniel Wilson, 18, was "blessed" to be alive. She said the knife missed his heart "by an inch" and he ended up with five stiches. The newspaper reports school resource officer took a male juvenile into custody.

Diocese recommends permanent suspension

OWENSBORO — A Catholic diocese has recommended a priest accused of sexually abusing two juveniles be permanently suspended from public ministry. The Messenger-Inquirer reported the Catholic Diocese of Owensboro released a statement Wednesday afternoon that included the recommendation for the Rev. Ed Bradley after an investigation into the allegations. Bradley was principal at Owensboro Catholic High School from 1980 to 1985 and was interim head of Owensboro Catholic Schools in 2017 until June of last year. He was temporarily suspended in March after diocesan officials received the first allegation. The statement said Bradley maintains his innocence.

Thank you for your support!

Bob Courtney

A Lifelong Resident with a Lifetime of Experience

As we approach election day next Tuesday, many of you have already made up your mind as to which candidate you will vote for the Republican nominee for Madison's Mayor. For those of you who have supported our candidacy, Tammy and I thank you from the bottom of our hearts. It has been an honor to even be considered worthy of the important role of Mayor of the City of Madison. We embarked on this journey together for one reason only and that was to make a difference in our community. Being a candidate for Madison's Mayor, and we use that term because we truly believe it is an office that should advocate for the entire community, not just a portion of it, has allowed us to reflect on our childhoods here in Madison, our influences, but most importantly, our belief that with new leadership and vision Madison can be a better place to live, work, raise a family, and visit. Neither one of us grew up with wealth or highly educated families. Tammy (Backus) grew up in Canaan on a farm with two brothers where her Dad (George Backus) farmed full-time and drove to Madison to work in a factory. Her mom (Joan Backus Smith) was an entrepreneur who opened her own business first on Mulberry Street and then on Main Street called Joan's Quilts and Crafts. I grew up on Walnut Street, the son of a truckdriver and stay at home mom, the youngest child of six kids with five older sisters. My dad was gone a lot driving a truck, so I spent most of my free time at the Lide White Boys Club. Both of our families worked hard to make ends meet but it was the work ethic and importance that education has on lives that resonated so firmly in our belief.

While Tammy and I could have lived anywhere after college, Madison has always held our hearts, so we raised our family here and have dedicated our lives to giving back to our community. Over the past 35 years, we have supported numerous charities, but we devoted most of our time and financial resources mainly to three endeavors, supporting the arts, supporting our youth, and investing in our neighborhoods to make Madison even more beautiful. With Tammy's career as an intensive care nurse and my career in the financial services sector, we both have seen several sides of the Madison community, one where there is still a lot of suffering going on, struggles to make ends meet, substance abuse disorders, rising crime, lack of economic gain by many, and poor access to treatment, to name a few. We believe these challenges are opportunities to improve our community with the right type of experience and leadership. Each mayor inherits the successes and challenges of his predecessors. While some progress has been made over the past seven years, there is still much to accomplish. What I have to offer is experience and leadership, plus a unique perspective having worked across the country with hundreds of public private partnerships. I want to bring my expertise in finance, having 20+ years of executive management experience, creating over $5 billion in investments nationwide, building my own small business and leading from the front using data driven decisions, tremendous energy and since of purpose, building consensus and affecting change in the lives of those who depend on local government to make our community safe, expand economic opportunity, and improve our quality of life for everyone. If you are ready for change and bold initiatives that will truly be impactful with experience and leadership that is engaging and transparent, please join the following group of other leaders in our community in supporting me for Madison's Mayor. Community service hasn't been my job, it's been my passion. Let's think big for our beautiful small community. Vote for Bob Courtney, a lifelong resident with a lifetime of experience. Thank you.

Substance abuse, economic issues top candidate concerns

By TALI HUNT

The Madison Courier reached out to candidates in contested races for next week's primary elections with questions about community issues and challenges.

All of the candidates responded except Bryan Hernandez, a democratic candidate for Madison's Mayoral race.

This year Jefferson County's contested municipal races include Madison Mayor, Madison Council Districts 1 and 5 and Hanover Council District 2.

Candidates in the Madison mayor and council races all noted substance abuse high on the list if not at the top.

They also talked about public safety and economic development issues.

The mayoral candidates all said they consider substance abuse to be the biggest challenge Madison faces, citing other issues, such crime and economic decline in some areas as symptoms of the larger substance abuse problem. Their plans to try to fight the substance abuse issues vary in some details but all include multiple facets of public and private sectors cooperation to provide different resources and services.

The candidates looked at programs that currently exist in the area, such as the Healthy Communities Initiative, that are working to improve the quality of life in Madison and talked about other programs they would like to create or explore that may be new or just new to Madison after showing success in similar areas.

City council candidates explained initiatives or programs they would pursue to meet a recent resolutions requirement pushed by Madison High School students participating in Student Government Day: find incentives to keep local high school graduates here to work or to bring them back after obtaining a degree.

Candidates for Hanover's District 2 council seat agreed that improvements to the town's roads and water tower were two infrastructure projects that need to be planned and carried through for the health and safety of Hanover residents.

The full answer from each candidate is on www.madisoncourier.com

Questions for the candidates

Questions for Madison mayoral candidates:

• What do you think is the biggest challenge the City of Madison is facing? Why? What would you propose the city do to address the issue?

• If there is any city policy that you could change on your own at this moment, which would it be and why?

• If elected, in what order would address the following issues? Order them by which needs to most immediate action to least immediate action. Can you provide a brief plan for how you might address each of your top 3 issues?

• How would you incentivize and assist small business and first-time entrepreneurs in Madison?

Questions for Madison City Council candidates:

• What do you think is the biggest challenge the City of Madison is facing? Why? What would you propose the city do to address this issue?

• If there was any city policy that you could change on your own at this moment, which would it be and why?

• If you are elected, in what order would you address the following issues? Order them by which needs to most immediate action to least immediate action: Substance abuse, crime, transportation/mobility, job creation, homelessness, suicide, small business assistance, hilltop enhancement, downtown parking.

• The students representing Madison during this year's Student Government Day passed a resolution that calls for action by the city to create incentives for local graduates to come back to work, live, etc. Do you agree that this resolution was necessary? If so then, how would you propose the city go about meeting this call to action? What kinds of incentives would you propose? How would you market them to the wide array of interests and alumni that Madison produces? How would you measure your program's success? If not, why?

Questions for Hanover council candidates:

• What do you think are the biggest challenges the Town of Hanover is facing? Why? What would you propose the council do to address these issues?

• If there was any existing town policy that you could change on your own at this moment, which would it be and why?

• Considering the town's infrastructure (roads, water lines, water tower, etc.), what do you think needs the most immediate attention and how would you propose the town address it?

Candidates speak out

A look at some of the issues and candidates' thoughts

Madison Mayoral

Candidates' thoughts on the substance abuse issue in the City of Madison:

BOB COURTNEY

Bob Courtney (R) – I think most people will say that one of the biggest community challenges is substance abuse because of the impact it has on so many things ranging from crime, jail overcrowding, loss of production, and impact on future generations. However, substance abuse is just the symptom not the root cause. Why? If we step back and take a more comprehensive and honest look at this issue, we can see that public policy has failed in so many ways and cultivated the scenario we have now. And as often is the case, once public policy does react, the problem is either different and/or much larger. It is easier to be reactive to a problem. Being proactive requires a long-term view, strategic planning, and sacrifices. Small rural communities like Madison are resource constrained in many ways. The biggest challenge Madison has is to grow its population, i.e. household formation. Madison's population has been stagnating to declining for decades. Madison needs to grow for a number of reasons including (1) meeting demands of our skilled and professional workforce; (2) expand our tax base so that our local government has more resources to fulfill its obligations; (3) add more consumers who will buy local goods and services, purchase durable goods like appliances and automobiles and homes, and (4) create economic opportunity with better paying jobs. The way we accomplish household formation is to scrap the old way to approaching economic development. The strength I bring to the community is having been involved in structuring and negotiating over $5 billion of investments nationwide. With that national perspective and my business background, along with my hometown roots, I will make sure that Madison receives a much stronger return on its investment when it is using city resources such as TIF bonds, tax abatements, grants, loans or special economic designations to attract, retain or expand small and large businesses in our community. We also need to do several more things such as (1) take advantage of our regional location and the significant economic drivers that are taking place around our borders such as River Ridge in Jeffersonville and the future new Ohio River Port in Lawrenceburg; (2) partner more collaboratively with Jefferson County leaders; (3) work extremely closely with the State of Indiana to market Madison and attract capital investment, and (4) expand our investment in improving Madison's quality of life with high impact investments in our parks, the riverfront, heritage trail, hilltop, and school systems. Madison is ideally located within short commuting distances to grow our population with higher paying jobs. As Madison's Mayor, my economic development policy will be focused not just on the businesses but to create economic opportunity and a higher standard of living for our residents. I am a firm believer that if we create economic opportunity and make the right front-end investment, we will grow our population, attract capital, and start eradicating our substance abuse issues.

ANDREW FORRESTER

Andrew Forrester (R) — Without a doubt, the biggest challenge for Madison is the substance abuse issue. The substance abuse crisis is the main reason behind many of the other big issues facing our community: crime, child abuse and neglect, overcrowded jails, lack of employable workers, overburdened social services, poverty, homelessness, and more. To most effectively combat the issue, we need to attack it from four directions: prevention/education, enforcement, justice, and treatment. On prevention/education, we need to be working more closely with our schools, churches, and social organizations to ensure that people know about the dangers of some of these substances. I think we all assume that everyone knows the dangers of substance abuse, but I don't think that's always the case. For enforcement, I know our law enforcement agencies are working diligently to get drugs off the streets. The Madison Police Department officers are doing a wonderful job, but they're hampered by job, but they're hampered by high turnover and a lack of tools to help them do their job safely and effectively. I think by increasing compensation and training, we can empower our law enforcement even more. On the justice side of things, the City doesn't have much control, but I will ensure that our police officers are getting the assistance, equipment, and training they need to help Prosecutor Sutter and Judge Mote be even more effective in doing their jobs. Finally, we must attack this through treatment. Madison has over 30 people in Salvation Army treatment facilities in Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, and Cincinnati. We have no treatment facility here, and I think we should. We have halfway houses that are doing an amazing job, but we need a more wholistic approach to treatment by adding inpatient and "three quarter houses" to complete the "treatment train" that we've been working toward for years. One important note on treatment: I am not in favor of a suboxone clinic. If we have a medical drug treatment facility, I would only be in favor of a clinic that requires shots or liquid medication that can't be put on the streets. I know there are a number of groups and organizations that are working to tackle the substance abuse issue and I have been part of a number of their meetings over the last seven years: JCJTAP, Coalition for Teens and Young Adults, Healthy Communities Initiative, and even more. As Mayor, I would work to focus all of those community efforts in one direction through a Substance Abuse Task Force focused on real change. The substance abuse challenge is not unique to Madison; almost every community (large and small) is dealing with the effects of this crisis and it will not be solved overnight. But I believe that we can fight back against this substance abuse issue by working together as a community. This issue is not just the Mayor's issue. It is not just the Judge's issue. It is not just a police or health issue. This is a community issue and we all should be asking ourselves what WE can do to help.

Julie Berry (D) – There is no greater challenge facing the City of Madison than that of Substance Abuse. This issue is negatively impacting families, schools, crime, local business, health and social service providers more than any other challenge in a generation. This challenge is not unique to Madison. Most of our nation's communities are dealing with this as well.

JULIE BERRY

I have spent hours listening to community stakeholders during the last year while preparing to lead our city. These have included: school officials, business leaders, police officers, hospital officials, members of our justice system, and a host of citizens that call Madison home. To a person they identify substance abuse as the most detrimental threat to our community.

I have prepared a Comprehensive Substance Abuse Plan with detailed Jefferson County statistics, local treatment options, and action steps to help stem this scourge locally. While the full 11 page plan can be viewed at www.julieberryformayor.com; the Plan includes assisting local not-for-profits with a Quarter House option to complement our existing Half Way Houses (Ruth Haven and Jefferson House); A strong Common Nuisance Ordinance to effectively deal with real estate used for the illegal drugs; and Raising local Police Salaries to be competitive with surrounding areas. Currently the Madison Police Dept. is down several officers, and salaries must be raised to attract and retain personnel. These salary increases will come from one of three sources (or a combination of the three): possible revenue from the public safety income tax being proposed by the County; budget cuts; or restructuring of existing budget line items. This is specific information – not rhetoric.

Myself, along with many others, have participated in the Healthy Initiatives Program Substance Abuse/Suicide and Mental Health committees. Over 325 people are participating in this effort. Dedicated volunteers have been working diligently to provide recovery options for those suffering from addiction. Over ¼ of the babies born locally are born to addicted mothers, and are therefore addicted themselves at birth. I call that a crisis. I pledge to be personally involved in reclaiming our community from the scourge of substance abuse.

Bryan Hernandez (D) — Hernandez has not responded to the Courier's attempts to make contact or responded to our questionnaire.

City council

Candidates' thoughts on creating incentives for local graduates to stay or come back to work, live, etc.

MIKE PITTMAN

District 1

Mike Pittman (R) – The resolution passed during Student Government Day shows their recognition of the need to improve Madison's quality-of-life and economic opportunity. There's no doubt these are issues in every community today, our ability to address and improve in these areas will definitely impact the return rates of students attending schools in the Madison and Jefferson County area. Jobs and affordable quality housing combined with our Historic District, Ohio River, and other local attractions and resources make Madison an extremely desirable area to locate.

Graduate retention would not be my program alone. In collaboration with the various schools, a program would be put together based on a survey of existing students, recent graduates, and alumni currently living in Madison to determine the reasons they would choose a place to live. For those graduates living in Madison, why did they come back? Each school would then promote the program and measure the return rate versus the objectives set for the program. The results can be presented during the Student Government Day at our city Council meetings.

Patrick Thevenow (R) – I agree this resolution was necessary, but do not believe incentives are the proper approach. Many young people do not want to return to a cities without economic opportunity and a high quality of life. I moved back to Madison to live after attending school and working out of state because I love this city. It's home. Home has different meanings for different people, though. Why would you want to move back to Madison if you grew up in a neighborhood riddled with crime that went unpunished and infrastructure that wasn't properly tended? We need to work towards making Madison a community everyone is proud to call home – regardless of their economic status or the neighborhood in which they were raised. Continuing to build a city that is full of opportunity and vibrancy is the first step towards retaining our youth. We must work to increase access to good paying jobs, attract diverse recreation opportunities, and create a safe and well run city. If the quality of place is there, the people will want to come home.

BRODY BENNETT

Brody Bennett (R) – This resolution was not only necessary, but essential and long overdue. As someone who graduated not long ago, I probably have a unique perspective on this issue in comparison to my fellow candidates. Though I was not one of the ones to leave Madison upon graduation I know of plenty of my classmates who did. A similar criticism from many them was "there's nothing here" or "there's nothing to do here". I would always disagree with them, and I still do for those that believe it. What is here is potential, what there is to do, is work, and I intend to do it. When I think of Madison's potential, I see a city where we both practice preservation and promote innovation. We have magnificent opportunities with an Ivy Tech campus here in our city. We have partnerships of leaders in business, government and education that we can continue to capitalize and expand on. As we enter the 2020's our growth, our expansion of business, our promotion of new industry both from the grassroots and from outside partnerships will be essential for us to remain economically viable. We need jobs in technology, programming, engineering, and perhaps most of all in education, to ensure that we continue to bring forward our best and brightest to make Madison greater with every passing generation. We must seek out wherever and whenever possible, opportunities to ensure that we can provide the career paths and overall quality of life necessary to serve the needs and aspirations of our citizens, both present and future. Lost history should not be the price of progress, too often it is, but not in the case of Madison. People often return to our city more greatly appreciating our rich history. I have a vision of a not too distant future where people are returning not just for an appreciation of that history, but to build a future; to work, live, and thrive here in Madison, and that will be the truest measure of any future success.

DARRELL HENDERSON

Darrell Henderson (R) – I think it is a great idea the students had, by the way I have never missed a student government day and really love to hear their ideas. The incentives the City has done in the past and will continue to do with the help of JCIDC is support local industry in creating more jobs and incentives for employers to be able to attract these college graduates to come back to Madison. In the past few years we have been very lucky in the fact we have filled all of our vacant buildings that were left empty by business leaving over the years , so our employment rate is low and we are retaining more local people. We are probably short on high tech industry . We will be working with Matt Wurth at JCIDC in this area. A measure of the success is hard to document but I will be working with JCIDC to come up with a process to track this.

Hanover Council

Candidates' thought on the town's infrastructure

CREE GREEN

District 2

Cree Green (D) – The roads need some work. I am sure the water lines and water tower do too. The town needs to try and work some of these projects in the budget.

KATHI SCROGGINS

Kathi Scroggins (D) – Infrastructure is a priority and the possibility of pursuing any and all grants is a must. We need to insure that we remain compliant with state regulations. I feel water and sewer upgrades at this time are a priority. This is a must for the health and well being of our residents. There are several other issues that the Town of Hanover faces that I as well as the other council members are passionate about.

Wise, bipartisan leadership

By BRIAN A. HOWEY

INDIANAPOLIS – History is fascinating because of the ironies produced. Man declares the first unsinkable ship will be built, and it plunges to the Atlantic floor on its maiden crossing. Or this, on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson who wrote the document and John Adams who argued for it in Congress, both pass away.

We had a similar scenario unfold in Indiana. As we prepared to memorialize the late Sen. Birch Bayh who died in March at age 91, we were thunderstruck with the news that Sen. Richard Lugar had died on Sunday at 87. These two men, one Democrat, the other Republican, both farmers, spent a combined 54 years in the U.S. Senate. Add Evan Bayh into the equation and we had either a Lugar or Bayh serving in the Senate for a half century.

Beyond the timeline, Birch Bayh and Richard Lugar reshaped not only the state, but our nation and world. Combined, Richard Lugar and Birch Bayh compiled legacies on a scale befitting a Founding Father, whether it was Bayh's two amendments to the U.S. Constitution (the most since James Madison), his ability to establish Title IX that opened up collegiate sports for women, or Lugar's work to render harmless the most potentially devastating weapons stockpiles known to mankind.

The pair would determine the fate of Supreme Court nominees, save auto companies, open up new energy strategies and address a growing thirst and hunger spreading across a rapidly growing populace on a planet under duress. They would work to protect intellectual property and combat juvenile delinquency.

RICHARD LUGAR

There would be two ill-fated presidential campaigns. Both men would lose their final campaigns. But it was clear during the Bayh memorial service on Wednesday that these two opponents who ran against each other in 1974 with Bayh winning, had forged the kind of steadfast friendship that we've seen in other rivals, perhaps most notably from Bill Hudnut and Andy Jacobs.

"He was a remarkable man," Jim Morris said at the Richard G. Lugar Plaza Monday as Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett and Gov. Eric Holcomb laid a wreath in the Republican senator's honor. "He saw his opportunities in the largest context. He had high aspirations for this community, with genuine affection for young people who were sad, lonely, at risk. He treated everyone the same."

Birch Bayh loved young people, too. Former congressman Baron Hill tells of Bayh showing up in his office where he spent a half hour helping an intern stuff envelopes. His 26th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution gave 18-year-olds the right to vote as some were dying on Vietnamese battlefields.

Tens of thousands of Hoosiers, perhaps even hundreds of thousands, connected with one another through the nexus of Bayh and Lugar's public service. These came through programs like the Lugar Series for Public Excellence that prepared women for office, his civic leadership program at the University of Indianapolis, or Bayh's pinpoint knowledge of where every Dairy Queen in the state was located, giving him access to soft ice cream and scores of voters. Their political organizations spawned waves of talent, from Mitch Daniels and Larry Conrad to Todd Young and Joe Hogsett, that pervades the state's power structure to this very day.

Bayh ran four Senate races, never winning by more than 4 percent, but he consistently took courageous stands on civil rights and came to oppose the Vietnam War. Lugar had 227,442 votes in his two Indianapolis mayoral races and established an arc where the five successor mayors continued the predecessor's projects.

He collected 7,135,898 votes in U.S. Senate races, a record that may never be broken. He cast more than 13,000 Senate roll call votes. He mentored more than 1,000 interns.

His greatest legacy is the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program that passed in 1991 after the Soviet Union collapsed.

The communist implosion left unpaid nuclear scientists, huge stockpiles of nuclear, biological and chemical weapons with no inventory controls, some even "protected" by nothing more than chain-link fencing and padlocks. It was a potential terrorist's treasure trove.

It deactivated more than 7,000 Soviet strategic nuclear warheads and destroyed 662 intercontinental ballistic missiles, 485 ICBM silos, 110 ICBM mobile launchers, 615 submarine-launched ballistic missiles, 30 nuclear submarines, 155 bombers, and 906 air-to-surface missiles.

Never had an arch-rival in the history of mankind so peaceably destroyed a foe's arsenal to this magnitude.

Birch Bayh and Richard Lugar had a humility we rarely see in today's politics. When Dan Quayle upset Bayh in the 1980 election, Evan Bayh recalled his father's "last political speech" to supporters at his campaign headquarters:

"I'd like to thank more than a million of my fellow citizens for encouraging me to take up the practice of law."

The next morning, the vanquished senator showed up at a Ford plant to thank supporters. "The election was over, he lost, there was nothing to be gained," Evan Bayh said. "He was there to say thank you. Elections come and go, but friendships and loyalty never die."

These Hoosier Senate lions rest in peace now. We can only hope their historic and sprawling legacies inspire future Hoosiers to take up the practice of wise, bipartisan leadership.

PATRICK
DISTRICT 1 ✶ REPUBLICAN

Election Day is Tuesday and I'm asking for your vote. We can't expect to solve our biggest problems if we're unable to take care of the basics. Strategic infrastructure investment and structural reforms at City Hall will make a real difference in our community.

Our Water Department must modernize and organize its operating policies. A comprehensive, long-term plan for infrastructure maintenance must be established.

The Historic Board must be reorganized to provide more consistency in decision making and to work with an increased focus on education. Preservation is crucial to our city, but the rights of property owners must be respected.

Investments in our sidewalks and drainage should be prioritized to the areas that need them most. A neighborhood cannot change for the better if the city is not willing to invest in its infrastructure.

Regional university presidents endorse Bevin's pension plan

FRANKFORT, Kentucky (AP) — Regional university presidents in Kentucky have endorsed a pension proposal drafted by Gov. Matt Bevin's administration, giving the plan a boost one day after an advocacy group criticized it.

The endorsement on Thursday came as the Republican governor tries to build support for his draft legislation ahead of a special legislative session that he's expected to call soon.

The goal is to relieve regional universities and agencies facing surging pension costs.

Bevin's proposal is being presented as an alternative to a pension bill he vetoed recently.

Top lawmakers have said it's up to Bevin to craft the new bill and line up support. The governor is seeking re-election this year.

The university leaders urged lawmakers to support Bevin.

"It has been our intention from the beginning to advocate for legislation that includes meaningful reforms and freezes each institution's employer contribution rate until reforms are enacted," they said in a letter dated Thursday and addressed to lawmakers.

"Gov. Bevin's legislation provides meaningful reform while preserving institutional choice," it added. "It ensures each institution's board of regents is empowered to make a responsible choice that is best for their respective institution and our employees."

The letter was signed by the presidents of Western Kentucky University, Eastern Kentucky University, Murray State University, Morehead State University and Northern Kentucky University.

Also signing it were the presidents of the Council on Postsecondary Education and the Kentucky Community and Technical College System.

The letter was released by the governor's office late Thursday.

The university leaders said in the letter that a failure to provide the pension relief would result in "disastrous consequences for our students and employees."

Bevin's administration has been crafting the measure aimed at giving regional universities, county health departments, rape crisis centers and many other quasi-governmental agencies relief from a looming spike in pension costs July 1.

The endorsement from university leaders comes a day after some resistance started emerging to the governor's plan. The advocacy group Kentucky Government Retirees said Wednesday that the proposal is "bad funding policy" that should be rejected by lawmakers.

"The new pension bill increases overall costs, compels the nation's worst-funded state pension plan to serve as a creditor, and encourages employers to force employees out of the state retirement plan," the group said in a statement.

Members of Bevin's team had closed-door meetings with lawmakers at the state Capitol to provide details about his proposed alternative to the pension bill he vetoed recently.

The draft bill has been portrayed by one top Republican lawmaker as having similarities to the vetoed measure and some differences.

Like before, the agencies will have the option of either staying in the system, buying their way out of the system with a lump sum payment, or paying off their debt in installments over 30 years. But this version of the bill bases any payments on how the agencies decide to handle employees hired before 2013.

Click It or Ticket patrols ahead in county

Courier staff report

The Jefferson County Sheriff's and Hanover Town Marshal's offices will join law-enforcement agencies this month across the nation to increase enforcement of seat-belt laws for Click It or Ticket. Multiple weeks of highly visible patrols will watch for unrestrained passengers in cars and trucks, both children and adults, the front seat and back, both day and night.

Click It or Ticket continues through the Memorial Day holiday and the start of the summer travel season. Overtime police patrols are paid with National Highway Traffic Safety Administration funds administered by the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute.

"Why are police warning everyone before the seat-belt crack-down begins? Because we respond to traffic crashes and we see the preventable deaths and painful injuries from motorists not buckling up," said a news release from Sheriff David Thomas and Town Marshal Joshua Taylor.

Indiana law requires the driver and all passengers to buckle up. Children under age 8 must be properly restrained in child car seat or booster seat.

The share of Hoosiers not buckling up has dropped to 6.6 percent, below the national average of 10.4 percent. But new data from ICJI and the Indiana University Public Policy Institute found unrestrained motorists still make up 53 percent of traffic deaths.

Unrestrained motorists are more likely to die in crashes by 10 times in cars and SUVs, 14 times in pickup trucks and 15 times in vans.

Drivers under age 24, especially young male drivers, are the least likely to be buckled during a crash. Injury rates among unrestrained motorists are also higher in rural counties, when a driver is speeding or impaired, and on weekend nights between 11 p.m. and 4 a.m.

During a crash, unrestrained passengers become projectiles that can injure or kill others in the car.

Traffic crashes are the leading killer of children ages 1 to 13. Parents and caregivers who do not buckle up are more likely to have kids who are improperly restrained, which means one ticket for the driver and one for each unrestrained child.

SEAT-BELT TIPS

Below are tips for proper seat-belt use:

• Secure the lap belt across your hips and pelvis, below your stomach.

• Place the shoulder belt across the middle of your chest and rib cage, away from your neck.

• Never put the shoulder belt behind your back or under an arm.

• If your seat belt doesn't fit you, or you have an older car with lap belts only, ask your dealer or vehicle manufacturer about seat-belt adjusters, extenders or retrofits.

Ian Kimmins picked up his 100th-career point and Hanover College's men's lacrosse team rolled into the Heartland Collegiate Lacrosse Conference tournament championship with a 22-6 whipping of Earlham Wednesday at home.

Kimmins, a sophomore from Dayton, Ohio, scored a team-high six goals and dished out two assists to push him over the 100-point mark for his career.

Kimmins wasn't the only Panther who found scoring easy. Noah King, a junior from Lexington, Kentucky, scored four goals and had a team-high six assists and Dirk Meinhart, a freshman from Elizabethtown, Kentucky, had four goals and two assists.

Second-seeded Hanover jumped out to a 5-0 lead after the first quarter and continued the scoring onslaught in the second, outscoring Earlham 5-1 to take a commanding 10-1 lead into halftime.

The Panthers did their real damage in the third quarter, however, scoring 10 times while holding the third-seeded Quakers to just two goals to build a 20-3

Groundwork set for 69th Governor's Cup, APBA Gold Cup

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

No deal reached yet for title sponsor of race but Rhinegeist Brewery to serve as the official craft beer of the Roostertail Music Festival

With just over two months left, everything is coming together perfectly for the 69th running of the Indiana Governor's Cup.

This year's race will also feature the APBA Gold Cup, the most prestigious trophy in the sport. But even with that added dimension, Madison Regatta officials are right on target.

Regatta President Matt True spent Wednesday's monthly general membership meeting highlighting where the organization currently stands and where it still needs to go entering the final stretch for race week.

"We've been working on a lot of things and as you can see, we have a lot of things already done," True said. "There are only a few small things left to iron out."

Among the items that have been checked off the Regatta's to-do list are permits with the states of Indiana and Kentucky as well as the Coast Guard. All of those permits have been returned to the Regatta and are in order.

True said that the sanction has been filed with the American Power Boat Association, the governing body of the race, and all cranes have been booked. True said he will pick up the Gold Cup trophy sometime later this month and the Regatta hopes to use the 115-year-old icon for marketing purposes around the state, including possibly at the Indianapolis 500.

The Regatta is still working on a possible carnival to be located at the foot of Jefferson Street, which would be open during music nights on the riverfront. True said the group putting on the carnival will be in town in the next few weeks to check out the location.

"We're always on the lookout for new things to offer to fans and when we were at the Indiana Festivals Convention we hooked up with these guys and it looked like a great idea," True said. "It would be outside of the Regatta footprint on Friday and Saturday night so you can come down, watch some fireworks and go on some rides."

While True said there are no plans in the works for a title sponsor of the event, the Regatta has worked out a deal with Rhinegeist Brewery to serve as the official craft beer of the Roostertail Music Festival. Rhinegeist is based out of Cincinnati.

This year will mark the first time since 1980 that Madison has hosted the APBA Gold Cup and it's not just local fans who are excited about the event. Festival Chair Kim Washer said that Unlimited hydroplane great Chip Hanauer, former Atlas Van Lines and Miller American owner Fran Muncey, and Muncey's son, Edward, and his family have already committed to coming to the race.

"I talked to Fran and Chip and they are excited about coming back," Washer said. "They booked their rooms today."

The Madison Regatta Festival will begin on Saturday, June 29 with the annual Little Miss, Princess, Miss Preteen and Miss Teen pageants and will continue throughout the week. The Roostertail Music Festival will begin on Thursday, July 4 and run through Saturday, July 6. The APBA Gold Cup race will be contested starting Friday, July 5 and run throughout the weekend.

In other business:

• Applications for all of the scholarship pageants will be available online at www.madisonregatta.com or at the pageants' Facebook page. A $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to the winner of Miss Madison Regatta pageant with the runner-up receiving a $500 scholarship.

• Reigning Miss Madison Regatta Karrington True, who is the daughter of Madison Regatta President Matt True, will be competing in the Miss Kentucky pageant starting June 6 in Louisville. The winner of the pageant will advance to the Miss America pageant later this year.

• Tarp and tent camping spots can be purchased online at the Regatta's website. RV spots are sold out.

The Regatta will also be offering parking spots on Vaughn Drive east of St. Michael's Avenue for a fee. Parking will be limited.

• Golf cart passes are currently on sale for $150. Purchasers must have a valid City of Madison pass to obtain a Regatta pass. Only 45 passes are available.

• Elections for officers of the 2020 event were held. President Matt True and vice-president Curtis Chatham will remain in their spots for another year as those positions are up every two years. Other officers are: Natalie Green, secretary; Cheryl Lyon, treasurer; Kim Washer, festival chair; Mike Lichlyter, sponsorship chair; Roger Snell, race chair; Jason Abbott, assistant race chair; Mick Barron, pit chair; John Knoebel, Libby Hoffman and Tim Lauk, board of directors.

• The next general membership meeting of the Madison Regatta will be at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 5 at The Boneyard Grill.

Editor's Notes:

• Haikal, third in the Wood Memorial, did not train Thursday morning at Churchill Downs and is questionable for the Derby. Trainer Kiaran McLaughlin said Haikal has an abscess in his left front hoof.

• Pre-race favorite Omaha Beach was scratched Wednesday due to an entrapped epiglottis — triangle-shaped piece of cartilage at the base of the airway above the soft palate. Because of the location, an entrapped epiglottis can cause difficulties breathing and would make it difficult to run a race without reversing the issue.

In addition to the top three scorers, Dallas Fonner, Eric Hopkins and Bret Schell each scored two goals for Hanover. Fonner also had three assists.

No. 4 Jac-Cen-Del stop Hilltoppers 13-2 on two-hitter

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Class A No. 4 Jac-Cen-Del limited Shawe baseball to just two hits but the Eagles made a couple of errors to get the Hilltoppers on the scoreboard but not nearly enough in a 13-2 Shawe loss Wednesday at Post 9 Field.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Henry Grote and Christian Whitham produced the Hilltoppers' two hits with Chris Powers and Whitham scoring the Hilltoppers' runs as part of a two-run third inning that pulled Shawe to within four of the Eagles.

Jac-Cen-Del quickly put down the comeback with a six-run fourth inning and added another run in the fifth to end the game on the mercy rule, 13-2 in five innings.

Matthew Binzer went the distance for Shawe, giving up eight earned runs on 11 hits and eight walks while striking out two. Shawe also committed three errors in the contest.

Dylan Swinney got the start and picked up the win for the Eagles, pitching four innings with no earned runs on two hits and three walks while striking out seven. James Burford pitched a 1-2-3 fifth to close out the win.

T.J. Menchhofer and Damon Hughes were both 2-for-4 with two runs scored to lead Jac-Cen-Del. Corey Hughes was 2-for-3 with a run and three RBIs and Miles McAdams was 1-for-3 with a run and two RBIs.

Shawe (1-12, 1-8 Ohio River Valley) was to play at South Central on Friday in Elizabeth.

Hanover no match for HCAC leader Rose

Hanover College baseball was on the wrong end of a doubleheader sweep Wednesday, falling 16-11 and 3-2 to conference front-runner Rose-Hulman in Terre Haute.

Hanover dug itself a deep hole in the opening game, trailing 12-1 after three innings, before mounting a mini comeback. The Panthers scored four runs in the fifth and one in the sixth to pull within 12-7, but Rose added four more runs in the sixth to put the game away.

Mark Walkenhorst was 3-for-4 with a home run, a double, two runs and two RBIs to lead Hanover while Grant Larimore went 3-for-6 with a homer, four RBIs and two runs scored. Spencer Coop and Andrew Littlefield each had a double and a single and scored a run, Charlie Burton had two hits, an RBI and a run scored, and Ty Stover had two hits and scored a run.

Littlefield started and lasted only an inning and two-thirds to take the loss. Littlefield (1-5) allowed seven earned runs on seven hits with three strikeouts and three walks.

Hanover scored first in game two when Stover drew a bases-loaded walk in the top of the first but the Panthers didn't score again until a Littlefield sacrifice fly in the ninth inning. In between, Rose-Hulman scored three runs and held on for the one-run win.

Larimore had a double while Ty Fitch, Walkenhorst and Stover each added singles. Zach Chapman (1-1) took the loss after allowing two earned runs on four hits in seven innings with four strikeouts and two walks.

Hanover (13-19, 5-11 Heartland Collegiate Athletic) was to play at Thomas More (Ky.) Friday and wrap up the 2019 season today in a doubleheader at Mount St. Joseph (Ohio).

The Fightin' Engineers (24-9, 13-1 HCAC) lead the HCAC and have already wrapped up the regular season conference championship with two games to play.

SLIDE MOVE: Shawe's Christian Whitham (2) slides into home plate with the second of the Hilltoppers' two runs in the third inning of Wednesday's 13-2 loss to Class A No. 2 Jac-Cen-Del. Walker Kinnett singled and an Eagles error allowed both Whitham and Chris Powers to score when the ball got by Jac-Cen-Del catcher Cory Hughes. (Staff photo by Mark Campbell)

North Vernon resident won photo contest

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Madison Courier

"I do not get to go to Versailles very often," McClanahan told Oak Heritage Conservancy, which sponsored the contest with the George Rogers Clark Land Trust. "It was actually my mom's idea to go hiking that day and I picked Versailles. I remember telling my girlfriend I would love to get a raindrop picture on some type of plant before I went hiking. After hiking for an hour I came across that spot where I took that picture and I probably took 100 photos, different angles and lighting to get it perfect. It's a photo to remember, for sure."

The deadline for entering the contest was Oct. 31, 2018; McClanahan said on his Facebook page that he had just taken up photography last year.

"I love taking photos here in Indiana," McClanahan told the conservancy. "We have such a wide variety of places to go for pictures. I've explored most of Indiana from top to bottom, taking pictures everywhere I go. It is so easy to find a spot and shoot. Whether you like walking trails and getting pictures, driving the back roads and shooting the fields, or even going north and shooting some on the dunes, Indiana has it."

People who voted in the contest could add comments. Brownlee said they included: "The pictures remind us of the beauty that surrounds us"; "They show the beauty that our state has to offer"; "No other place has same landscape"; "We are still rural"; "Southern Indiana is a special place where the land is not spoiled by urban sprawl and over-development"; and "This is what home looks like."

More than 270 pictures were entered in the Nature and Farm Photo Contest. Forty finalists were chosen and were displayed online and at community events around southern Indiana during the winter.

Anyone could vote for their favorite, and 1,068 voted. McClanahan's grand prize is a year membership in Oak Heritage Conservancy.

Voters in the contest had to answer a few questions before voting.

"We asked people if the photos made them feel proud to live in Indiana," said Liz Brownlee, executive director of Oak Heritage Conservancy. "We want people to think about what's beautiful around them--what they value, and what they want to protect."

Oak Heritage protects natural areas such as forests and wetlands for the public to visit and enjoy, she said. The conservancy has nature preserves with hiking trails and hosts nature events such as butterfly walks and scavenger hunts throughout southeastern Indiana. The George Rogers Clark Land Trust helps farmers protect their land as working farmland, Brownlee said.

More than 95 percent of people said the photos made them feel proud to live in Indiana, Brownlee said. She said one of the people who answered "No" added, "No not proud, grateful."

Ninety-eight percent said that when they drive around southern Indiana, they like seeing the fields, forests and wetlands that are a part of small family farms, Brownlee said.

More than 370 million acres of farmland – that's more than 40 percent--will change hands in the next 10 years, according to the American Farmland Trust, Brownlee said. That's because the average American farmer is nearing retirement, she said.

The photo contest survey asked:

"Our land trusts want to protect land as working farms, wetlands, forests, and natural areas. Do you think this is a priority for our community?"

Brownlee said that more than 90 percent of people said, "Yes, this is a priority."

"Hoosiers value that our state is agricultural, and that our farms are diverse. They like seeing forests and ponds and wetlands and meadows," Brownlee said.

"Our group can help protect this diverse, beautiful landscape that we call home," she said. "Together with our members, we are working hard to ensure that your grandkids and their grandkids will get to experience Indiana as a rural, natural place."

About 70 percent of the people who voted in the contest said they had visited a farm in the past six months – many were their own families' farms, or nearby farm businesses, like pumpkin patches, Christmas tree farms and wineries.

"Our members fuel conservation in southeast Indiana," Brownlee said. "They help create nature preserves, hiking trails, and nature programs for kids. Steve (McClanahan) is joining a growing community of nature-lovers."

Oak Heritage Conservancy has 15 nature preserves in southeastern Indiana. The preserves are free and open for the public to hike and explore. The group also hosts programs in nature such as the recent Park Hop scavenger hunt that invited children and families to explore the parks and nature preserves of Jefferson County. The preserves and directions to them are at oakheritageconservancy.org

Brownlee said the photo contest is made possible by the Indiana Arts Commission and the federal National Endowment for the Arts.

Making mountains out of molehills

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I just turned 39 and am freaking out about my next birthday, when I will go from being a young person to a middle-aged person. I remember when I was a child everyone making such a fuss over my parents turning 40. And now here I am turning 40. Do you have any suggestions for coping with this monumental change of life? — Scared of Aging

Dear Scared: It's as monumental as you make it, and try not to make a molehill into a mountain. Your actual age is nothing but a number, and, as they say, 60 is the new 40. And if you keep a good mental attitude and take care of yourself physically, you could feel even better at 60 than you do at 40.

Dear Readers: Many of you wrote in about "Deeply Hurt in Florida," who was offended by the way she was addressed on the invitation to her grandson's wedding. Here is a sampling of comments and advice:

Dear Annie: My husband and I enlisted the help of friends to address our wedding invitations nearly 17 years ago. I remember that day making last-minute changes to names, and I'm sure we made some mistakes. I also remember feeling stress because it was the first big project my fiance and I had ever tried to manage together.

I hope "Deeply Hurt in Florida" will offer grace, much grace, to her grandson and his fiancee. Many weddings are needlessly stressful times for the bride- and groom-to-be. — Offering Perspective to Deeply Hurt

Dear Offering Perspective: Thank you for sharing your story. The fact that your fiance is still your husband is what really counts when it comes to wedding planning, and I agree that much of the stress involved is needless. Brides and grooms frequently will have other people write the invitations. Whatever the cause, it is nothing to be alarmed about, as the next letter, from a grandmother and great-grandmother, points out.

Dear Annie: I could not believe the grandma in Florida was so upset by her correct name being on the invitation. It could be that others were helping write the invitations and did not know her preferred name.

As a grandmother of 21 and great-grandmother of seven, I would not let anything so minor affect my going to a family wedding. You were right. Ask that the placecard be corrected and enjoy the occasion.

I have not written to a columnist before but could not believe the grandmother could be making such a mountain out of a molehill. Isn't she fortunate to see a grandson married? — Grandmother and Great Grandmother

Dear Grandmother and Great Grandmother: You're the best! I love your attitude, which, as you can see, is shared by a reader from New Hampshire who wants nothing more than to have grandchildren.

Dear Annie: Regarding "Deeply Hurt in Florida," I find it sad that she may not attend her grandson's wedding over such a minor detail as being addressed as Judy instead of Chris.

Does she know how fortunate she is to have her grandson in her life? Many of us don't have the pleasure of having grandchildren or great-grandchildren in our lives, and how heartbreaking that is. We have so much love that we cannot share with them. — Heartbroken in New Hampshire.

Dear Heartbroken: You address the real issue, which is love.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! BRIDGE

HOW GOOD IS YOUR OPPONENT?

Andre Ward, a professional boxer who retired undefeated in 2017, said, "The game plan might be different based on the opponent, but the approach is the same."

At the bridge table, your game plan may change depending on your opponent's skill level. You often need to be able to read your opponent. At other times, if you cannot find a guaranteed line of play or defense, try to make your opponent guess what to do.

How does that apply in today's deal? South is in three no-trump, and West leads a fourth-highest heart six.

South starts with seven top tricks: two spades, one heart (given the lead), one diamond and three clubs. Since he can get two or three more winners from diamonds, things look sunny -- but read on.

After declarer plays a low heart from the board, East should see that if he wins with the ace, South must take at least one trick with dummy's queen, and two if he holds the king. So, East must put in the 10, preferably in tempo, not after considerable thought. Declarer wins with his king, crosses to the board with a club and runs the diamond jack, nine or eight.

After West takes the trick with his king, he continues with his heart jack, giving South a nasty guess.

With this layout, declarer must play low from the dummy, blocking the heart suit and making his contract. But suppose West had started with A-J-9-8-6 of hearts and East with 10-5-2? Then South's playing low from the board on the second round of hearts would draw smiles only from the defenders as they take one diamond and four hearts.
